Campuswide

Ten UI faculty members, five graduate teaching assistants and an academic staff member were honored April 26 at the annual Instructional Awards Banquet.

Campus Award for Excellence in Undergraduate Teaching

The principal award for undergraduate instruction at the UI recognizes UI professors and graduate teaching assistants who display consistently excellent performance in the classroom, positively affect the lives of their students, take innovative approaches to teaching, and make other contributions to improved instruction.

Faculty winners (pictured throughout this insert) are: Philip Beriak, professor of agricultural engineering and of human and community development and on the Campus Honors faculty; Orville V. Burton, professor of history, senior research scientist at the National Center for Supercomputing Applications and on the Campus Honors faculty; Paul F. Diehl, professor of political science; Janet Lyon, professor of English and of women’s studies; and Robin H. McFarquhar, professor of theater. Faculty members receive $5,000 and a $3,000 raise. (Graduate teaching assistants appear on P. 2.)

Campus Award for Excellence in Advising Undergraduate Students

John P. Fiore, associate head for undergraduate affairs in the department of psychology, and Michael H. Pleck, professor of general engineering and associate head of the department and professor of CEPS guided individual study, were honored for excellence in advising undergraduate students. Each receive $2,000.

Fiore has been with the department of psychology for 31 years. In that time he has organized and staffed the advising office, and has been the person primarily responsible for the department’s excellent reputation both on- and off-campus. He also has provided guidance to many advisers across the campus, and was one of the founding members of the Campus Academic Advising Commission.

As chief adviser for general engineering, Pleck oversees the advising program for more than 400 undergraduate majors. In that capacity, he interacts with countless current and prospective students, provides general leadership and guidance to other faculty advisers, and has created an innovative Web-based tool, the Course Planning Consultant, which prompts students to take key courses and alerts them if prerequisite courses have not been met.

Campus Award for Excellence in Graduate and Professional Teaching

Charles W. Smith, professor of veterinary clinical medicine and chief of small animal surgery, has been teaching professional and graduate students for nearly 30 years. He has been active in the college’s mentoring program, helping first- and second-year students make the adjustment to the rigor of a veterinary education. He also has worked with local animal shelters and humane societies to develop a program in which veterinary students share their surgical skills. This award, designed to reward faculty members in professional or graduate programs who normally wouldn’t have an opportunity to compete for undergraduate teaching awards, awards Smith $5,000 for his personal use and a $3,000 raise.

Campus Award for Excellence in Guiding Undergraduate Research

Juliet E. K. Walker, professor of history, directs an average of four undergraduate research projects each year, working individually with each student on a topic of his or her choice. Since 1976, she has helped undergraduate students develop the critical skills that are important to succeed both in academia and in the various career paths her students have followed. Seven recent graduates have gone on to publish their work and several have won regional and national undergraduate research awards. She receives a $2,000 award.

Campus Award for Innovation in Undergraduate Instruction Using Educational Technologies

Since 1995, Donna J. Brown, professor of electrical and computer engineering and research professor in the Coordinated Science Lab, and her graduate and undergraduate students have developed and refined Mallard, a novel interactive learning environment based on the World Wide Web. Mallard has had an extraordinary impact on undergraduate education at Illinois and at other universities. It has been used in courses in biology, business, economics, engineering, foreign languages and statistics, and its use continues to grow. As winner of this award, Brown receives a $2,000 award.

Campus Award for Excellence in Extramural Teaching

Frederick E. Below Jr., professor of plant physiology in the department of crop sciences, has developed and taught courses to off-campus master’s students since 1986. He writes, “The opportunity to interact closely with working professionals in my field has done more for my teaching and research than I could have possibly imagined.” In the past three years, as coordinator of the department’s off-campus master’s program, Below has increased enrollment, improved the program’s focus and marketing, and added new off-campus locations. Through this award, Below receives $4,000, and his department will be granted $1,000 to improve extramural instruction and to develop programs.
Faculty and staff members and graduate students were honored at the sixth annual UI College of Veterinary Medicine awards program last fall.

Teaching Excellence Award

Ted Lock, professor of veterinary clinical medicine, was selected by the third- and fourth-year veterinary students as winner of the Teaching Excellence Award for presenting material with enthusiasm, dedication, clarity and creativity and for integrating subject concepts into the framework of the curriculum.

Service Excellence Award

John Andrews, professor of veterinary pathology and director of the Laboratory of Veterinary Diagnostic Medicine, won the Service Excellence Award for outstanding committee work, clinical service and continuing education.

Research Excellence Award

Jonathan Foreman, professor of veterinary clinical medicine, garnered the Research Excellence Award, given in honor of the quality and quantity of publications, research awards and outside recognition of his work.

Dr. Gordon and Helen Kruger All-Round Excellence Award

Val Beasley, professor of veterinary biosciences, received the Kruger award signifying excellence in the college’s three-fold mission of teaching, research and service.

Academic Professional Award of Excellence

Katie Henry, director of budget and resource planning, veterinary administration, won the Academic Professional Award of Excellence in recognition of outstanding performance and professional excellence at the college.

Shirley Sheets Staff Excellence Award

Lucille Wright, administrative secretary, veterinary medicine, was the first recipient of the Shirley Sheets Staff Excellence Award, which recognizes a full- or part-time permanent non-academic employee in the college with at least three years of service and demonstrated excellence in overall job performance and service. Seets retired as business manager II last year after 34 years of service with the college.

Helen and Norman Levine Award

The Helen and Norman Levine Award recognizes research productivity and excellence among young faculty members at the college. Winner of the 1998 Levine award was Ted Whittem, professor of veterinary biosciences.

Pfizer Animal Health Award for Research Excellence

Richard Isaacs, professor of and assistant head of veterinary pathobiology and professor of microbiology and of immunology, won the Pfizer Animal Health Award for Research Excellence. It is presented to a faculty member for research that shows promise of attaining or that has attained national recognition.

Chicago Veterinary Medical Association Outstanding Instructor Award

Members of the Chicago Veterinary Medical Association who graduated from the UI College of Veterinary Medicine in the past two years selected Ralph Hamor, professor of veterinary clinical medicine, for the association’s Outstanding Instructor Award.

Dr. Joseph O. Alberts Award

David Buchanan, veterinary research specialist in the department of veterinary biosciences and in the Environmental Council, received the Dr. Joseph O. Alberts Award. Created in memory of a former head of veterinary pathobiology, the award is presented on the basis of faculty nominations, an outstanding record and a research paper.

Loyd E. Boley Award

Bradley Coolman, teaching associate, veterinary clinical medicine, was the recipient of the Loyd E. Boley Award. Established in honor of the former head of the clinics and dean for students, the award recognizes and stimulates excellence in resident training in veterinary medicine.

Carl J. Norden Outstanding Teacher Award

Howard Gelberg received the Carl J. Norden Outstanding Teacher Award. Gelberg is a professor of veterinary pathobiology, associate dean for research in the College of Veterinary Medicine and assistant dean of Research Leadership-Veterinary Programs in the College of Agricultural, Consumer and Environmental Sciences. This award recognizes outstanding teaching ability as well as character and leadership qualities. Pfizer Animal Health sponsors the award, which is presented annually to an exceptional faculty member at each of the nation’s 27 veterinary colleges.

Graduate Teaching Assistants

Campus Award for Excellence in Undergraduate Teaching

Five graduate teaching assistants were honored for consistently excellent performance in the classroom, positively affecting the lives of their students, taking innovative approaches to teaching, and making other contributions to improved instruction, including influencing the curriculum.

Graduate teaching assistants who were honored are Susan A. Dun, speech communication; Dennis A. Eichhorn, mathematics; Joseph B. Perry, history; Carrie A. Rentschler, communications research; and Amanda J. Rose, psychology. Graduate teaching assistants receive $3,500 and a $1,000 raise.
College of Medicine

Raymond B. Allen Instructorship Award

Each year, a faculty member is selected by each class of medical students to be honored for distinguished teaching. Named for the college’s former dean, the awards also are known as the Golden Apple Awards. The recipients and the class that honored each: Victor F. Feldman, clinical professor of surgery and of internal medicine (third-year students); Mouaz N. Tawam, clinical assistant professor of internal medicine (second-year students); and Martha S. Sweeney, lecturer in the department of cell and structural biology (first-year students, academic year 1997-98).

Academic Professional Employee of the Year Award

James W. Hall, assistant dean for student affairs, was honored as the Academic Professional of the Year. This award was established to honor an individual who has made significant contributions to the success of the college in the preceding year.

Staff Employee of the Year Award

Candice J. Sullivan, staff secretary (transcribing), fiscal affairs and administration, was selected as the Staff Employee of the Year. This award was established to honor an individual who has made significant contributions to the success of the college in the preceding year.

College of Applied Life Studies

Award for Excellence in Undergraduate Teaching

Matthew C. Ehrlich, professor of journalism, was honored for excellence in undergraduate teaching. Selected as the best teacher by graduating seniors in the college, Ehrlich has appeared consistently on the List of Teachers Ranked as Excellent. Many of his students have won journalism awards for stories produced in his classes. Carrie Rentschler, a teaching assistant in the Institute for Communications Research, was honored for excellence in undergraduate teaching by a TA.

Excellence in Undergraduate Teaching Award

Ron Chambers, professor of speech and hearing science, was honored for excellence in undergraduate teaching. Ken Bartlett, a graduate assistant in the department of leisure studies, was honored for excellence in undergraduate teaching by a graduate assistant.

Outstanding Mentoring of Graduate Students

Janet Reis, professor of community health and undergraduate studies, lecturer and student teaching supervisor in the department of health and human performance, received the Staff Excellence Award. The award recognizes someone who displays excellence in overall work performance, promotes positive morale, exhibits professional growth, displays creativity and initiative, and enhances the image of the unit and university.

Excellence in Guiding Undergraduate Research

Karl Rosengren, professor of kinesiology and of psychology, was recognized for excellence in guiding research of undergraduate students.

O willie Vernon Burton, professor of history, senior research scientist at the National Center for Supercomputing Applications and on the Campus Honors faculty, won the Campus Award for Excellence in Undergraduate Teaching. Personal and intellectual interaction is a key to Burton’s pedagogy. For his students, this means mass dinners of “good Southern cookin’” and research trips to his home town in South Carolina. For Burton, it also means a good deal of behind-the-scenes hard work, mentoring students, providing copious commentary on student papers, posting lecture outlines on the Web, and providing nationally recognized leadership in computer-assisted instruction.
College of Agricultural, Consumer and Environmental Sciences

Paul A. Funk Recognition Awards
Three faculty members were honored for outstanding professional achievement and major contributions to the betterment of agriculture. These awards are presented as a memorial to the late Paul A. Funk, who attended the college as a member of the class of 1929. The awards were presented to Neal R. Merchen, professor of animal sciences and of nutritional sciences, for his research in the area of protein/amino acid nutrition of ruminants; John C. van Es, professor of rural sociology, of human and community development and of sociology, for his teaching, research and extension activities in rural sociology, community development, and environmental issues affecting agriculture; and Donald G. White, professor of crop sciences, for his teaching and corn pathology and breeding research.

Karl E. Gardner Outstanding Undergraduate Adviser Award
Thomas W. Fermanian, professor of horticulture in the department of natural resources and environmental sciences, was cited as an exemplary career counselor, adviser and educator who also serves as co-adviser of the Horticulture Club. George R. and Arthur H. Bunn of the Bunn-O-Matic Corp. of Springfield established the award to honor Karl F. Gardner, a former associate dean and director of resident instruction in the college.

John Clyde and Henrietta Downey Spitzer Teaching Award
William C. Sullivan III, professor in the department of natural resources and environmental sciences, was cited as an outstanding educator with tremendous depth of knowledge, enthusiasm, high standards and insightful mentoring skills. Mildred Spitzer Johnson of Urbana established the award in honor of her parents. Her father was associate director of extension at the UI when he retired in 1949.

Service Recognition Award
Edward W. Stoller, plant physiologist in the department of crop sciences, was recognized for outstanding professional achievement and demonstrated excellence. Stoller was cited for his extensive work on weed seed dormancy, his significant and numerous contributions to the university and as adviser to graduate and postdoctoral students.

Faculty Awards for Excellence
Six faculty members were recognized for outstanding professional achievement and demonstrated excellence in teaching, research or extension. Senior college awards are presented to faculty members who have at least 10 years of service to the college; College awards are for faculty members with five to 10 years of service to the college.

Senior College Faculty Awards
Philip Buriaj, professor of agricultural engineering, of human and community development and on the Campus Honors faculty, was recognized for excellence in teaching. Marshal D. McGlumery, professor of crop sciences, was recognized for excellence in extension. Lila O. Vodkin, professor of crop molecular biology in the department of crop sciences, was recognized for excellence in research.

College Faculty Awards
Aaron T. Ebata, professor of social development in the department of human and community development, was recognized for excellence in extension. Jasna D. Jovanovic, professor of human development and of women’s studies, was recognized for excellence in teaching. Brent A. McBride, professor of human development and director of the Child Development Laboratory, was recognized for excellence in research.

Professional Staff Awards for Excellence
Four staff members were honored for sustained excellence or for innovation and creativity. This year’s award winners are Edward N. Ballard, UI Extension animal systems educator in the Effingham area (sustained excellence), Paul W. Benson, instructor in the Technical Systems Management Program in the department of agricultural engineering and director of the Illinois Electric Council (sustained excellence); Julie Fesenmaier, senior research specialist in community development, tourism, leadership and program evaluation in the department of human and community development (sustained excellence). James E. Painter, teaching associate in food service systems, manager of the Bevier Cafeteria, the Child Development Laboratory, was honored for making a positive impact on the lives of students and the campus in general and a proven record of extending oneself to the benefit of students.

Student Affairs

Oustanding Staff Award
Outstanding Staff Award winners are Gina L. Arnold, secretary, Counseling Center; Caron A. Bosley, administrative assistant, Office of the Vice Chancellor; La Vonne M. Novakofski, financial aid adviser, Student Financial Aid; and Hank R. Walter, associate director, Illini Union. Criteria for the award included exemplary service that has made a positive impact on the lives of students and the campus in general and a proven record of extending oneself to the benefit of students.

Barbara Huffman, a staff secretary for the department of veterinary clinical medicine, has been honored by the Counseling Center for making significant contributions to the campus in keeping with the Counseling Center’s goals of enhancing student development and maximizing students’ abilities to make satisfying life choices. The award is named after the late Dr. Robert P. Larson, emeritus psychologist, who was the first professional staff person employed by the UI Counseling Center in 1938. The award also was presented to the Human Interest Professors (HIP) Club.
Graduate College
Outstanding Mentoring of Graduate Students

The Graduate College Award for Outstanding Mentoring of Graduate Students recognizes exemplary efforts by graduate faculty members in advising and serving graduate students. Recipients are Robert Dale Parker, professor of English, and Joseph H. Pleck, professor of human and community development.

Dean's Award for Excellence in Undergraduate Teaching

The four professors judged to be outstanding teachers of undergraduates were Orville Vernon Burton, professor of history, senior research scientist at the National Center for Supercomputing Applications and on the Campus Honors faculty; Paul F. Diehl, professor of political science; Janet Lyon, professor of English and of women’s studies; Karl-Heinz Schoeps, professor Germanic languages and literatures and on the Campus Honors faculty. Established to promote exceptional achievement in undergraduate teaching, criteria include consistent excellent performance, impact on students, innovative approaches to teaching and other contributions to improved instruction, including influence on the curriculum.

Award for Excellence in Undergraduate Teaching by a Graduate Assistant

Six graduate assistants were honored for excellence in teaching. They are Susan A. Dun, speech communication; Dennis A. Elchhorn, mathematics; Suzanne K. Hilgendorf, Germanic languages and literatures; Joseph B. Perry, history; Joseph R. Pomerening, plant biology; and Amanda J. Rose, psychology.

Humanities Award for Excellence in Teaching

The Humanities Award for Excellence in Teaching honors superior teaching by one faculty member and one graduate teaching assistant each year. Daniel J. O’Keefe, professor of speech communication, and Amber Landis, graduate teaching assistant in comparative literature were honored.

Academic Advising Awards

The Academic Advising Award recognizes and encourages quality advising of undergraduate students in the college. Recipients are Nancy Blake, professor of comparative literature and of women’s studies and on the Campus Honors faculty; and John P. Fiore, associate head for undergraduate affairs in the department of psychology.

Nancy J. McCowen Distinguished Service Award

Arnita Althaus, staff clerk, Afro-American studies, was honored for exemplary service to the college. Named for a former administrative assistant in the college, the award recognizes someone who goes above and beyond an expected level of service on an ongoing basis.

College of Liberal Arts and Sciences

Robin H. McFarquhar, professor of theater, has won the Campus Award for Excellence in Undergraduate Teaching. Specializing in movement for the actor, McFarquhar has taught a variety of skills to undergraduate theater majors during the past 15 years. Many of his former students are now working professionally as fight directors and choreographers, and he has involved many others directly in professional productions. On warm spring afternoons, he and his stage combat class can be seen with their swords and quarterstaffs practicing in the Krannert Center amphitheater.
College of Engineering

Stanley H. Pierce Award
Marianne Winslett, professor of computer science, has actively assisted students in her department and college through several endeavors. She has set up a system to assist students find out about and participate in award opportunities, has served as academic adviser for first-year graduate students, and also mentors women students. This award, named for former associate dean of the college, is presented to a faculty member and student who have "done the most to develop empathetic student-faculty cooperation."

Collins Award for Innovative Teaching
Qin Zhang, professor of agricultural engineering, was honored for innovative teaching. In teaching Instrumentation and Measurements (AgE 311), Zhang redesigned the course to emphasize active learning and professional communications. Named for W. Leighton Collins, a faculty member in the college from 1929-65 and former executive director of the American Society for Engineering Education, the award recognizes outstanding development or use of new and innovative teaching methods.

Rose Award for Teaching Excellence
Patricia M. Jones, professor of mechanical and industrial engineering, was given the Rose Award for Teaching Excellence. Jones was commended for developing and teaching a new industrial engineering section for the Mechanical and Industrial Engineering Freshman Discovery Seminar. Intended to foster and reward excellence in undergraduate teaching, this award recognizes teachers who excel at motivating undergraduate students to learn and appreciate engineering.

Xerox Awards for Faculty Research
The Xerox Foundation established the Xerox Awards for Faculty Research to honor faculty members for outstanding research as judged by their colleagues. Three awards are given to associate professors judged to have conducted the best research during the past five academic years; three awards are given to assistant professors judged by colleagues to have conducted the best research during the last academic year.

This year's award winners are associate professors David J. Brady, electrical and computer engineering; Shang-Hua Teng, computer science; and Alexander F. Vakakis, mechanical and industrial engineering; and assistant professor Rich Braatz, chemical engineering. Philippe Geubelle, aeronautical and astronautical engineering; and Naresh Shanbhag, electrical and computer engineering.

Tau Beta Pi Daniel C. Drucker Eminent Faculty Award
Gordon Baym, Center for Advanced Study professor of physics, was honored for extraordinary scholarship, inspired teaching and committed public service. The award recognizes faculty members who have received national or international acclaim for dedication to academic excellence through teaching and research and who have made exemplary contributions to the understanding of their fields. The award demonstrates the ideals of Daniel C. Drucker, the college's dean from 1968 to 1994, who worked with and personally supported many programs of Tau Beta Pi, the national engineering honor society.

Everitt Award for Teaching Excellence
Vinay Gupta, professor of chemical engineering, and Lenny Pitt, professor of computer science, were honored for teaching excellence. Gupta is a dedicated scholar who cares deeply about his subject and transfers this enthusiasm to his students. Pitt brings enthusiasm into the classroom and feels that a teacher who is truly excited about the beauty of a problem cannot help but draw students into the learning experience. Established in 1968 to honor retiring Dean William L. Everitt, the award annually recognizes two or more faculty members for their outstanding undergraduate teaching. The award is one of the most coveted by faculty members and serves to emphasize the value that is attached to good teaching in the college. The award is made possible through an endowment contributed by personal and corporate friends of Everitt.

Teaching Excellence Award
Steven J. Franke, professor of electrical and computer engineering, is consistently rated as one of the top instructors in his department. He displays an exceptional ability to inspire students. Funded through an endowment by an alumnus and his wife, the award is given to help motivate teachers to increase the educational impact they have on their students.

College of Fine and Applied Arts

Outstanding Faculty Awards
Five faculty members nominated by their peers received Outstanding Faculty Awards. Nominees are evaluated on the basis of their accomplishments in research, teaching, creative activity, professional activity and public service. Recipients usually display excellence in more than one of these areas. This year’s recipients: Colleen Bushell, professor of art and design; Terence Harkness, professor of landscape architecture; Henry Maguire, professor of art and design; Brian Orland, professor of landscape architecture; and Renee Wadeleigh, professor of dance.

College of Law

Outstanding Faculty Member Award
Andrew D. Leipold, professor of law, was honored for outstanding teaching and contributions to students of the College of Law. He was selected by the graduating third-year students.
Janet Lyon, professor of English and of women’s studies, has won the Campus Award for Excellence in Undergraduate Teaching. Since joining the faculty in 1990, Lyon has designed and taught several critical undergraduate courses in English and in women’s studies, including the foundation course in feminist theory, the culture of modernism, and women of the avant-garde. Students in her courses are encouraged to go beyond the simple reading of texts, and to explore literature’s intersections with politics, art, sociology, music and history.

Janet Lyon, professor of English and of women’s studies, has won the Campus Award for Excellence in Undergraduate Teaching. Since joining the faculty in 1990, Lyon has designed and taught several critical undergraduate courses in English and in women’s studies, including the foundation course in feminist theory, the culture of modernism, and women of the avant-garde. Students in her courses are encouraged to go beyond the simple reading of texts, and to explore literature’s intersections with politics, art, sociology, music and history.

Janet Lyon, professor of English and of women’s studies, has won the Campus Award for Excellence in Undergraduate Teaching. Since joining the faculty in 1990, Lyon has designed and taught several critical undergraduate courses in English and in women’s studies, including the foundation course in feminist theory, the culture of modernism, and women of the avant-garde. Students in her courses are encouraged to go beyond the simple reading of texts, and to explore literature’s intersections with politics, art, sociology, music and history.
College of Commerce and Business Administration

Excellence-in-Teaching Awards
Two faculty members and two teaching assistants were honored by the Commerce Alumni Association for excellence in teaching.

- Excellence-in-Teaching Award for Undergraduate Teaching
  David M. Snow, adjunct professor of finance, was honored for his teaching. According to course evaluations, many students describe his Wealth Management and Life Insurance course (Fin 262) as the best course they’ve taken at the university.

- Excellence-in-Teaching Award for Graduate Teaching
  Charles M. Kahn, the Bailey Distinguished Chair in Finance, is a specialist in the economics of information and uncertainty. His performance in MBA 405, Strategic Thinking and Incentives, was singled out for this award.

- Excellence-in-Teaching Award for Teaching Assistants
  Jon D. Perkins and Catherine Shakespeare, both teaching assistants in accounting, were honored for excellence in teaching.

- Commerce College Research Awards
The College of Commerce Office of Research established these two awards last fall, one for junior and one for senior faculty. Although in the field only a few years, Kevin Hallock, professor of economics and of labor and industrial relations, is already established as an expert on executive compensation.

- Commerce Outstanding Staff Award
  Naoko Miki, secretary IV, economics, is the first recipient of the CBA Outstanding Staff Award. She has been a staff member with the department of economics for 15 years and is highly valued for her skills as a technical typist, her tremendous knowledge of the department’s computer systems, and her understanding of faculty research issues.

- Executive and Professional Development Award
  Gregory B. Northcraft, professor of business administration, has been generous in giving of his time and energy in teaching and in support of the Executive Development Center. The award is made possible by Investors in Business Education and is given by the Business Advisory Council.

- Commerce Council Outstanding Teaching Awards
  Two faculty members and one teaching assistant were recognized for outstanding teaching by the Commerce Council. Recipients are selected by the college’s students.

- Commerce College Council Excellence in Teaching Award
  Theodore Sougiannis, the Weidlon Powell Professor of Accountancy, received this award for excellence in teaching and in supporting the teaching profession.

- Commerce Academic Professional Award
  Alice Waldoff, director of publications, is the first recipient of the Commerce Academic Professional Award. She has worked for the college for 22 years. “She has won praise and esteem throughout the college and the university for the generous way in which she gives not only of her time and expertise, but her concern.”

- Commerce Council Committee Excellence in Teaching Award
  Theodore Sougiannis, the Weidlon Powell Professor of Accountancy, received this award for excellence in teaching and in supporting the teaching profession.

- Commerce Council Outstanding Teaching Awards
  Two faculty members and one teaching assistant were recognized for outstanding teaching by the Commerce Council. Recipients are selected by the college’s students.

- Commerce Council Outstanding Teaching Award
  Theodore Sougiannis, the Weidlon Powell Professor of Accountancy, received this award for excellence in teaching and in supporting the teaching profession.

- Commerce Council Outstanding Teaching Award
  Theodore Sougiannis, the Weidlon Powell Professor of Accountancy, received this award for excellence in teaching and in supporting the teaching profession.

- Commerce Council Outstanding Teaching Award
  Theodore Sougiannis, the Weidlon Powell Professor of Accountancy, received this award for excellence in teaching and in supporting the teaching profession.