A common adversary can unify and empower those whose lives it touches, as cancer did for staff in the College of Veterinary Medicine. When Dee Bergman’s mother, a co-worker and another employee’s spouse all were stricken with breast cancer, Bergman and her office-mates mobilized to help others fight the disease. During the past two years, these caring employees and their family members have walked mile upon mile during an annual fund- raiser that celebrates survivorship and supports cancer programs and research.

Likewise, Karen Carney, Office of Continuing Education, reaches out to assist others facing challenges similar to those she’s known in her own life by giving to charities supported by the Campus Charitable Fund Drive. “I give . . . because I have two small children and so know firsthand how challenging parenting can be for those who have very stable life circumstances,” Carney said. “(Also) nearly every family, including my own, has someone dealing with some form of mental illness – clinical depression, schizophrenia, mood-disorders, dementia . . . and people need to have a place where they can go for information and help.”

Charitable organizations such as those supported by the campaign rely upon individuals to provide the majority of the resources they need – both in terms of helping hands and desperately needed funds. Without the volunteers and donors, many of the programs and services these organizations provide would not be possible. University of Illinois employees’ contributions to the hundreds of organizations supported by the CCFD enable agencies close to home and around the world to fight myriad social problems, such as disease, poverty, homelessness and racism. By generously sharing their time and money, Illinois-employees enrich the lives of others through job-readiness training, educational opportunities, constructive leisure activities and preservation of natural resources.

Everyone, from the very youngest to the very oldest, benefits from programs made possible by these agencies. Illinois employees’ contributions, no matter how small, form the stepping-stones to a positive future.

During the turbulence the world has faced throughout the past year, neighborhood and public spiritedness have been tested time and again. Despite those challenges, UI employees have demonstrated that community spirit and humanitarianism still thrive.

You decide which charity receives your donation

The Campus Charitable Fund Drive offers many ways to contribute with individual agencies to choose from. Many of them are here in Champaign County, serving your family and friends; many others provide services across the country and extend to all parts of the world. Consider a donation to one or several of the following organizations that are participating in this year’s fund drive. More information on these organizations is in the brochure distributed by departmental volunteers or you can look online.
Those who contributed $1,000 or more are designated as Campus records at the end of the 2001 Campus Charitable Fund Drive. We apologize if any names were inadvertently omitted.
